What is common between Sir Ben Kingsley, Jackie Chan and Sachin Tendulkar? Well, the first two are eminent Asians to have received the prestigious Asian Awards. And, on May 5, Tendulkar, too, will be added to that list. The cricketing legend will be conferred the Asian Awards Fellowship, which was instituted by London-based entrepreneur Paul Sagoo. The award is presented to global icons of Asian origin, and Tendulkar is the second Indian — Pandit Ravi Shankar was the first — to be on the hallowed list.

Are there any awards left that Sachin Tendulkar hasn't won?

While you were probably getting out of bed on Saturday morning, Sachin Tendulkar was bagging yet another award. The cricket legend was half way across the world when you were making you coffee to accept The Fellowship Award at the Asian Awards in London. It has been a little over three years since Sachin announced his retirement from all forms of cricket but the awards clearly haven't stopped coming his way.

The inaugural Asian Awards were held in 2010 and since then only three other people have been given the honour of the Fellowship Award: The late Pt Ravi Shankar, Sir Ben Kingsley and Jackie Chan. On Friday, Sachin Tendulkar became only the fourth person to win the trophy.

We have always reiterated, Amy Jackson might not have given us notable mentions on the silver screen, but she has given us enough blockbusters on the fashion front. Not just her red carpet looks, her off-duty style is something to look out for. The Singh Is Bling actress set the temperature soaring in a sexy blue number by designer Maria Lucia Hohan from The Box Boutique, an online concept store. The one-shouldered cut-out gown with the flowy silhouette fitted her like a glove.

Doctor, who treated poor for free, bags Asian Award

Kolkata: Dr Jack Preger, Kolkata's "Pavement Doctor", became the first living Westerner to be honoured at the "Asian Awards". Dr Jack Preger, MBE, was named "Philanthropist of the Year" at the Asian Awards ceremony in London on Friday, in recognition of his service in helping the poorest of the poor in Kolkata for the past 38 years.

It was the first time that a living person, not of Asian origin, was honoured with the award. Mother Teresa had received a posthumous award last year.

The NGO "Calcutta Rescue" had been founded by Dr Preger. It helped more than half a million people over the past 38 years. Dr Jack told the audience, which included Sachin Tendulkar and London mayor Sadiq Khan, "This is an incredible honour for me. This award will be of great help in this country for our support groups raising funds. It's a great help in Kolkata," said the doctor.

Child actor Sunny Pawar has a strong fan base that include stars like Sachin Tendulkar, Varun Dhawan, Anupam Kher and many more. The actor received the Rising Star Award, at the annual Asian Awards in the UK, for his role in the Oscar-nominated film, Lion where he played young Saroo.

At the award show, from legendary cricketer Sachin Tendulkar, veteran actor Anupam Kher and Bollywood star Varun Dhawan — everyone stopped to take pictures with the adorable 8-year-old. “You’ve won our hearts, Sunny!” wrote Sachin Tendulkar on Instagram, while posing with him for a picture.

The child actor had already dominated on the red carpets of prestigious award shows, like Golden Globe and Oscar Awards. If ever there is a biopic about Sunny Pawar, his tale of how he emerged from the slums of Mumbai to being Hollywood’s darling, it would be an extremely gritty story a lot like his debut film Lion.

The Asian Awards is proud to be honouring one of the world's greatest sportsmen, Sachin Tendulkar, with the prestigious Fellowship Award. The accolade is presented to global icons who have excelled and made significant strides and contributions in their respective careers. Previous honourees include music legend, Ravi Shankar, Oscar-winning actor Sir Ben Kingsley and one of the most prolific actors of all time, Jackie Chan.

Sachin Tendulkar is, without a doubt, the greatest cricketer to come out of India, the most prolific run-maker and one of the greatest batsmen of all time, earning him the nickname, Master Blaster. Outside of sport, Tendulkar's philanthropic efforts are widely recognised. In 2008, he was awarded the Padma Vibhushan, India's second highest civilian award and in 2014 Sachin Tendulkar received India's highest civilian honour, Bharat Ratna, the youngest ever person to receive the accolade.

Meet Jack Preger, the Pavement Doctor Who Serves Kolkata's Poorest

On May 5 when 86-year-old Dr Jack Preger received the 'Philanthropist of the Year' award at the Asian Awards ceremony in London, he became the first living Westerner to be honoured at the awards. But no distinction can be adequate recognition for Preger's selfless and self-effacing service, which has made him a legend.

Along with devoting his life to serving the poor, Preger has also fought against child trafficking, for which he had to suffer a lot. In fact it was in this context that I first met him as a young reporter about four decades ago and was as greatly impressed by his quiet courage and devotion to his medical work.

Preger studied political science and economics at Oxford University, but could not settle into an academic life. In fact, for some time he worked as a farmer in Wales before finally deciding to study medicine in Dublin, Ireland. He initially planned to serve the poor in Latin America as a doctor but when stories of extreme distress from the then newly independent Bangladesh came to his attention, Preger gave up his other plans to go there instead.

Dr Jack Preger was named Philanthropist of the Year at a star-studded ceremony in London.

The award recognises his extraordinary contribution to helping the poorest of the poor in Kolkata for the past 38 years.

It is the first time a living person not of Asian origin has been honoured at the awards, though Mother Teresa received a posthumous award last year.

Asian Awards Fellowship honour for Sachin

The master blaster has been honoured with yet another award to add to his gallery. Sachin attended The Asian Awards ceremony on Friday at the London Hilton on Park Lane. The ceremony celebrates excellence in the global Asian community. And this time it was Sachin who was conferred with the Fellowship award at The Asian Awards.

India's cricket icon Sachin Tendulkar plans to support charities and various initiatives to help the under-privileged people in the second innings of his life. Tendulkar made the remarks while receiving the Fellowship Award. He said playing for India for 24 years was a memorable journey and winning the world cup was icing on the cake.

Tendulkar's journey to international stardom through cricket is an interesting tale told through his much-awaited biographical drama, "Sachin: A Billion Dreams". Produced by Ravi Bhagchandka of 200 Not Out and Shrikant Bhasi of Carnival Motion Pictures, and helmed by Emmy-nominated James Erskine, the film is releasing on May 26.

Family in legal row with Jemma face losing £2m home

FORMER model Jemma Kidd and her aristocratic husband Arthur Morington, the future Duke of Wellington, lead a gilded life of wealth and glamour.

As the Marquess and Marchioness of Douro and heirs to a £75million fortune, they live with their three children on the stately Stratfield Saye estate in Hampshire - bequeathed by the grateful nation to the first Duke of Wellington after his victory at the Battle of Waterloo.

But I can reveal there has been a sad falling out with friends and former business partners over a dispute set to be aired in a court in Guildford next month.

The ex-friends concerned, Grace Watson - a one-time marketing consultant for High Street chain Boots - and her husband Tom were even invited to the Moringtons' glamorous June 2005 wedding at the Kidd family's Barbados estate. And the BATTLE: Tom and Grace Watson, above, used their house to guarantee a loan to Jemma's make-up business

Watsons were partners in Jemma's business, Jemma Kidd Make-Up Ltd, which was dissolved five years ago.

Today, though, the Watsons say that they could lose their £2million Surrey farmhouse to the Queen's bank, Coutts as a result of the dispute - which centres on the closure of Jemma's business. The private bank is suing after the Watsons used their property to guarantee a £1.1million loan to the cosmetics firm.

The Watsons learned last October that Coutts was trying to repossess their home. Jemma has previously said claims by the Watsons about how the business was wound up are 'groundless'. She said: 'We worked tirelessly to save the business and it was with huge sadness we were unable to do so.' Coutts said: 'We are unable to comment as legal proceedings are live but will outline our case in full at the forthcoming trial.'

With the Big 3-0 looming... Adele morphs into Nan

IT SEEMS superstar singer Adele - who hit 29 last week - is taking her advancing years to heart.

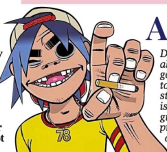

After celebrating her birthday on Friday, she posted this snap of herself dressed as an old woman - and bearing an uncanny resemblance to Catherine Tate's foul-mouthed character Joanne 'Nan' Taylor. The photograph was accompanied by the slightly alarmed message: 'Nearly 30!'

Adele, who according to the latest rich list is worth £125million, has just returned from playing to a million people during an arduous tour of Australia. It's not the first time she has marked her birthday by dressing up. For her 27th, she made herself up as her best pal, the late George Michael.

WHAT A R!@!NG LIBERTY! Adele, top, on Instagram and, left, Catherine Tate as Nan

A dark moment for Gorillaz

DAMON ALBARN'S 'virtual' band Gorillaz may have released a new album and dates for a European tour last week, but it hasn't all been good news. I'm sorry to report that a ten-part TV series they were due to make with Hollywood giants Dreamworks has been shelved, after the studio raised concerns that the cartoons would be 'too dark'. The band is usually represented by fictional cartoon characters, such as bass guitarist 2-D, left. Unable to pitch it to a family audience, Hollywood producers passed on the series, which would have cost tens of millions of dollars. The band have since made a low-budget show, which is still awaiting a TV slot.

You won't BELIEVE what they tell me!

'They reported that I've managed dramatic weight loss. I have never been fatter and I am happy. When I read it, I thought, "Oh I have let everybody down!"'

Phew, it seems comedienne Sarah Millican isn't wasting away after all.

'Unless I sleep with them, I couldn't spend any more time with them.'

Grand Tour star Richard Hammond reveals just how close he is to his fellow presenters.

'After getting abuse for doing a bikini shoot, I plan to do the next one nude. The trolls had better watch out. The wrath of Khan will be unleashed.'

Loose Women star Saira Khan, right, who I met at the Asian Awards, is definitely not the sort of person to take a trolling lying down.

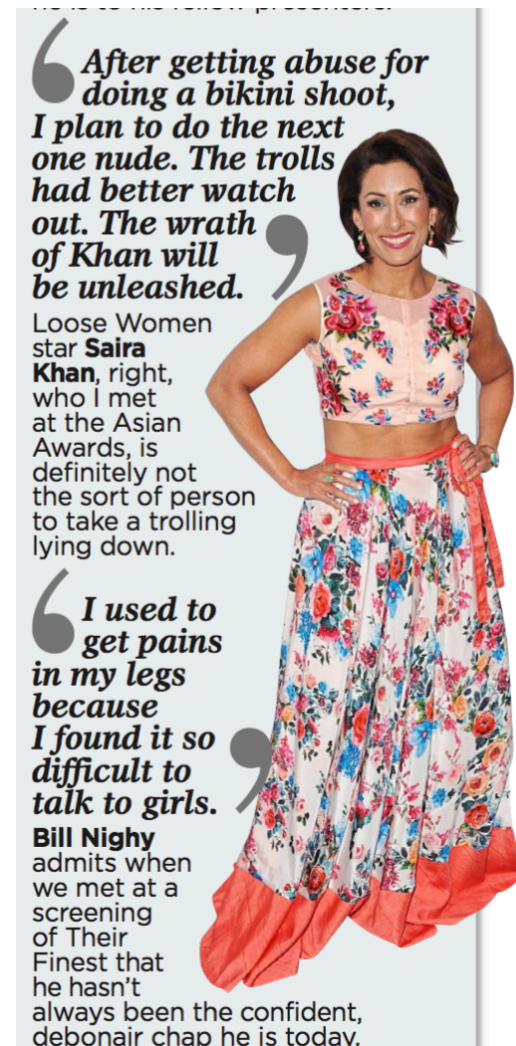

'I used to get pains in my legs because I found it so difficult to talk to girls. Bill Nighy admits when we met at a screening of their finest that he hasn't always been the confident, debonair chap he is today.'

'There is no room for intelligence in the charts any more. Maybe there are some exceptions, but I don't listen to the charts now. Sir Elton John laments the demise of pop.'

'When I started as Lord Great Chamberlain, my grandmother was rather confused and asked me if I was Lord High Executioner!'

Film-maker the Marquess of Cholmondeley admits to a comical mix-up.

'Obama has to be my favourite guest. The worst guests repeat slogan after slogan. That's usually Labour. Andrew Marr reveals his best and worst interviewees at the Hatchards Author Of The Year Awards, and gets a bit political.'

Sanjeev Bhaskar, the star of Goodness Gracious Me and The Kumars, was not encouraged to enter the world of showbusiness. At the Asian Awards on Friday, the comic said that when he was five years old one of his uncles came to his house. “So young man, what do you want to be when you grow up?” the uncle asked. “An actor,” said the young boy. His dad shot him an angry glance. “Son,” he said. “I think you’ll find it is pronounced doctor.”

Sadiq Khan, the mayor of London, was also there. He was in a bouyant mood and explained that he was excited to meet Sunny Pawar, the nine-year-old star of the Oscar nominated film Lion.

Jones outlines plan to save Test cricket

1989 Ashes winner calls for World Test Championship over a four-year cycle

Dean Jones, the former Australia batsman, has shown his passion for the Test game by outlining his plan to save it to The Cricketer.

His blueprint involves a Test Championship to be played in one country every four years, involving matches of four days' duration, many of them under lights.

"We know Test cricket is in trouble," said Jones. "It is plainly obvious that Test cricket needs a World Championship with a lot of dollars at stake. The downturn in TV ratings around the world is telling us that with so many meaningless Test series, it is boring the fans and players."

"The players find Test cricket hard work and not financially rewarding enough and don't really want to play it. I am told that the ICC Future Tours Programme will cease after the World Cup in England in 2019. This will be a good move, as I believe the FTP needs to work in a four-year cycle. My FTP would look like this: 2020 – World T20; 2021 – World Test Championship; 2022 – gap year; 2023 – ODI World Cup in India."

"My model would have two groups of five. It would be played in a nominated country over about 50 days. Countries can bid for it, similar to the Olympics. Many of these Tests will be day/night. The two from each group go through to semi-finals and final."

"The Tests should be played over four days, 100 overs per day. Each should have batting and bowling bonus points for first innings, achieved in the first 100 overs."

"The problem with our Test teams is there is a huge gap between the No.1 team [India] and the bottom one [Zimbabwe]. I like the concept of the bottom three having to re-qualify in two years, with countries like Ireland and Afghanistan knocking on the door."

"Countries would still have the opportunity to organise their own Test, ODI and T20 series – like the Ashes, Border-Gavaskar Trophy and so on. It is time for a change. Let's give Test cricket its own World Cup and then we can honestly say who the real world No.1 is."

Sachin opens up on new film

Sachin Tendulkar delighted his many fans in England by receiving an award here, and promoting a new film that celebrates his stupendous career

The 44-year-old won a fellowship award at the Asian Awards in London, and also promoted Sachin: A Billion Dreams, which is in cinemas from May 26. It is a docu-drama about his life, featuring interviews, new dramatic footage and archive material.

"I'm excited," Tendulkar told The Cricketer. "As the release date comes closer and closer, the nerves might start building up, but, as of now, I am happy with what I have seen. There has been a lot of hard work gone into it, so I hope people enjoy it."

"There are not many changes you can do with my life, because the whole book is in front of you. Just to be able to capture the right moments, and then make people understand what was going on in my mind, which has not been seen before, will be great."

"There were different phases in my life. When I started, I was only 16, and there were other guys taking more responsibility, and taking those important decisions. Senior players who were double my age – a few of them were even more than that – so they were taking all those critical decisions, and I was free to just go out and play."

"As the time went by, I became vice-captain of the team, and then captain, and then most senior member of the team – I had different roles to play, not just as a team man, but as a batsman. And I had to understand those roles, and play my game accordingly. So the role I was doing as an 18 to 19-year-old, other 18 to 19-year-olds were doing when I was 34."

"If you talk about the 'good years', 1990 was an important year: my first hundred in England, at Old Trafford, when I was only 17, to save the Test. After that I believed I could go out and score big runs. It was not about 40s and 50s, but going beyond that. When I went to Australia, playing on completely different surfaces – Sydney was completely different to Perth in 1991/92 – after that I believed I could play anywhere in the world. I also recall fondly the 169 in Cape Town [in 1996/97] and the 149 in Cape Town in 2010/11."

"The Chennai innings [103 not out in 2008/09] was the most important innings of my life, because of the tragic terrorist attack in Mumbai. England graciously agreed to come back to play cricket in India – that changed everything for us. That dramatic Test where England dominated for three and a half days, and then on the fourth day, just before tea, we started taking the initiative."

"To chase 387 on that surface, the bowling attack was one of the best England have had – Steve Harmison, Andrew Flintoff, James Anderson, Monty Panesar and Graeme Swann – you can't get a better attack than that: you had swing, you had reverse swing, you had somebody who could get extra bounce with the new ball, off-spinner, left-arm spinner... it was a complete attack. That was a big achievement to get people to smile again, even if just for that second when India won."

Asked to name his toughest opponents, he said: "On my first tour to England [in 1990] they had Graham Gooch and Robin Smith who scored heavily. Then we played Sri Lanka, who had Sanath Jayasuriya... there was also Brian Lara and Steve Waugh..."

"There are at least 25 bowlers I could list. How do you pick between a Glenn McGrath and a Curtly Ambrose? Shane Warne or Muttiah Muralitharan? Anderson and Dale Steyn? They are all world-class bowlers."

Congratulations to Sunny Pawar who starred in Lion and received the Rising Star award at the Asian Awards in London. Lion highlights the very real risks for children on the streets of Kolkata. This wasn't just a Hollywood story but the harsh, gritty every day for thousands of men, women and children in Kolkata. A third of people in Kolkata live on the streets or in slums.

Complimenti all'eroe indiano del cricket Sachin Tendulkar e alla piccola Star di Hollywood Sunny Pawar che sono stati tra coloro onorati da un premio agli annuali "Asian Awards 2017".

La cerimonia, che si è svolta venerdì 5 maggio presso l'Hilton Hotel, Park Lane a Londra, celebra l'eccellenza nella comunità asiatica globale ed è giunta al settimo anno. Durante questa prestigiosa manifestazione si è reso omaggio all'attore indiano Om Puri, scomparso a 66 anni all'inizio di quest'anno, per l'eccezionale successo della sua carriera cinematografica. Presenti anche gli attori Varun Dhawan e Amy Jackson. Quest'ultima, indubbiamente bellissima, ha creato scalpore per il suo look a tratti troppo rivelatore! 😊 ❤️ ella
